COVER

Read about a case study-based approach in an introductory biology course that enhanced reading and quantitative skills of students on page 32. An innovative city-as-lab approach that places community resources at the core of instruction is described on page 40. An article about academic integrity on page 50 points out that a plagiarized paper is just “a click away” and that academic integrity is a learned skill that can be taught to and modeled for students.
