

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

CONTENIDO

VOLUME 221 No. 2, FEBRUARY 2012

- 34 New Tricks From Old Dogs.
The genetic code for canine shapes and sizes may help scientists unravel human disease.
Evan Ratliff.
Photographs by Robert Clark.
- 54 The Calm Before the Wave.
Tsunamis strike almost every year. When and where will the next giant wave hit?
Tim Folger.
ESSAY: A Japanese mother's tsunami warning.
Marie Mutsuki Mockett.
- 80 Kazakhstan's Tomorrowland.
The oil-rich country's brash, billion-dollar new capital has everything — including “the banana”.
John Lancaster.
Photographs by Gerd Ludwing.
- 102 Leonardo...Or Not?
A chalk-and-ink drawing purchased for $21,850 could be a $100 million masterwork. The proof may come down to 500-year-old book.
Tom O'Neill.
- 110 Reclusive Rocks.
Do you like grit in your teeth? Isolation? Hoodoos that sniff hues? Then come to the Southwest's well-kept secret: Vermilion Cliffs Monument.
Verlyn Klinkenborg.
Photographs by Richard Barnes.
- 126 Last of the Cave People.
They came to meet Papua New Guinea's no mads — and stumbled in to a life-and-death crisis.
Mark Jenkins.
Photographs by Amy Toensing.

DEPARTMENTS

4 Editor's Note.

6 Letters.

8 National Geographic on TV.

9 Explorers Journal.

12 VISIONS

18 Your Shot.

21 NOW

Horn Heists.

The demands of Asian medicine have taken a toll on taxidermied rhinos.

Love Geography, Part I.

Top online-dating terms vary by state: “antler” in Montana, “sequin” in Arizona.

Love Geography, Part II.

Global terms of endearment vary too.

Mastodon Mystery.

Why are there so many bones near a Colorado reservoir?

Bumblebee Flight Pattern.

They plot the best route to each flower.

29 NEXT

Meow in the Dark.

Cast in a study are set aglow by a luminescent jellyfish protein.

Descent to Mars.

Lowered by a crane, roving robot Curiosity will explore the planet.

The Modern Melting Pot.

Census data shed light on integration — and segregation.

Gauging Head Injuries.

A device helps medics find hard-to-detect brain injuries in soldiers.

142 NG Connect.

143 The Moment.

Flashback.

ON THE COVER

Penny, born January 27 2004, is the great-great-great granddaughter of the famously photographed Weimaraner Fay Ray. Says Wegman: “She is the quietest and stillest and most reliable of my dogs”.

Photo by William Wegman.