

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

CONTENIDO

VOLUME 305 No. 3 SEPTEMBER 2011

FEATURES

- CITIES: SMARTER, GREENER, BETTER
- 38 Street-Savvy.
Humankind's future is in the city. That's a good thing.
George F. R. Ellis.
- SMARTER//////////
- 42 The Social Nexus.
The best way to harness a city's creative potential is to jack people into the network and get out of the way.
Carlo Ratti and Anthony Townsend.
- 50 Engines of Innovation.
Living cheek by jowl is fueling our continued success as a species.
Edward Glaeser.
- 52 Bigger Cities Do More With Less.
Luís M. A. Bettercourt and Geoffrey B. West.
- 56 Global Bazaar.
Today's street markets and shantytowns are forging the world's urban future.
Robert Neuwirth.
- 62 Better Health for the Uncounted Urban Masses.
Gordon McGranahan and David Satterthwaite.
- 64 Brains over Buildings.
To rejuvenate cities, look to teachers.
Edward Glaeser.
- GREENER//////////
- 66 How Green Is My City.
Retrofitting is the best way to clean up urban living.
David Biello.
- 70 All Climate Is Local.
The world's cities are stepping up to limit climate change and plan for its unavoidable effects.
Cynthia Rosenzweig.
- 74 The Efficient City.
A raft of technologies can cut consumption and waste.

Mark Lamster.

BETTER//////////

76

Castles in the Air.

Building skyscrapers makes sense on many levels.

Mark Lamster .

84

Street Talk.

Survey respondents weigh in on how to make.

Compiled by Michael Easter and Gary Stix.

88

Life in the Meta City.

The forces of change war with those promoting rigidity, says the author of Neuromancer.

William Gibson.

DEPARTAMENTS

6

From the Editor

8

Letters

14

Science Agenda.

The U.S. should level the playing field between city, suburb and countryside.

The Editors.

16

Forum.

New York City has plans to lead on R&D.

Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg.

18

Advances.

Crowds and stress. An Antismoking vaccine. Cool Clouds. Google's Science Fair champ. Vacuum-pump cuisine. Novel x-rays. War technology. Perils of positive thinking.

32

The Science of Health.

Parents who refuse to vaccinate children need to know the risks they run.

Matthew F. Daley and Jason M. Glanz.

36

TechnoloFiles.

The demand for complex passwords has gotten out of control.

David Pogue.

90

Recommended.

The art of medicine. How scientific thinking illuminates the world.

Dinosaur exhibit.

Kate Wong.

92

Skeptic.

What is pseudoscience, anyway?

Michael Shermer.

94

Anti Gravity.

Hobnobbing with laureates and laureates-to-be at Lindau.

Steve Mirsky.

95

50, 100 & 150 Years Ago.

96

Graphics Science.

Fossil power takes a great human toll.

Mark Fischetti.

On the Cover

Projections that nearly 70 percent of the global population will be urban by 2050. Cities face huge challenges, but they are also engines of culture, creativity and economic activity. And some are leading the way to limiting and planning for global climate change. This special issue examines the city's strengths from unexpected angles.

Cover image by Christopher LaBrooy.