

SMITHSONIAN

CONTENIDO

VOLUMEN 43, No. 5, SEPTEMBER 2012

CONTENTS

- 42 Keep it Simple.
Passionate to the point of obsessive about design, Steve Jobs insisted that his computers look perfect inside and out.
Walter Issacson.
- 50 Better Living Through Imitation.
Creative minds are increasingly turning to nature —banyan tree leaves, butterfly wings, a bird's beak— for fresh design solutions.
Tom Vanderbilt.
- 54 China's Most Dangerous Man.
Recently named the world's most powerful artist, Ai Weiwei is best-known for daring works that are highly critical of the government.
Mark Stevens.
- 62 Overnight Sensation.
Once a rarely used key on the typewriter, the graceful @ character has become the very symbol of modern electronic communication.
William F. Allman.
- 64 Extreme Pogo.
How three lone inventors took a classic toy that had changed little since it was invented 80 years ago and transformed it into a gnarly, big air machine.
Ariel Sabar.
- 72 Koolhaas Country.
Age has not tempered the Dutch architect, who at 67 continues to shake up the cultural landscape with his provocative designs.
Nicolai Ouroussoff.

DEPARTMENTS

- 4 Contributors.
- 9 From the Editor.
- 10 From the Castle.
- 12 Discussion.

- 14        Phenomenon.
This month's theme is invisibility, from hidden codes to covert gorillas.
- 25        How She Overcame.
Aung San Suu Kyi reveals how she survived decades of house arrest.
- 32        Planet Fever.
Hundreds of exoplanets and counting.
- 37        The Martin Chronicles.
Martin Amis contemplates Evil.
- 49        “Pattern and Snarl”.
A new poem.
Amit Majmudar.
- 70        National Treasure.
The pink flamingo lawn ornament roosts in the iconography of American pop culture.
- 80        Books.
- 84        Smithsonian.
What's new around the Mall.
- 104       Fast Forward.