

THE SCIENTIST

CONTENIDO

VOLUMEN 25 No. 2, FEBRUARY 2011

FEATURES

- 30 Face to Face with the Emotional Brain.
COVER STORY
Amygdala responses to the facial signals of others predict both normal and abnormal emotional states. An understanding of the brain chemistry underlying these responses will lead to new strategies for treating and predicting psychopathology.
Ahmad R. Hariri and Paul J. Whalen.
- 36 The Genes of Parkinson's Disease.
The minority of Parkinson's cases now known to have genetic origins are shedding light on the cellular mechanisms of all the rest, bringing researchers closer to a cause — and perhaps a cure.
Bobby Thomas and M. Flint Beal.
- 42 Opening a Can Of Worms.
A father's determination to help his son resulted in an experimental treatment for autism that uses roundworms to modulate inflammatory immune responses. Can the worms be used to treat other diseases?
Bob Grant.

DEPARTMENTS

- 12 Editorial
To Err is Human.
This is your brain on emotions.
Sarah Greene.
- 18 Notebook
Jaume and the Giant Genome; Puzzle Me this; Hidden Jewel: Down but Not Out, One on one: Parasites Unite!; Top 7 from F1000.
- 26 Thought Experiment.
Do Fruit Flies Dream of Electric Bananas?
Visualizing neuronal activity in small brains over four dimensions
Björn Brembs.
- 28 Critic at Large.
At the Tipping Point.
Data standards need to be introduced — now.
H. Steven Wiley.

- 48 Profile
Impure Genius.
Lewis Cantley has made a career of turning chemical contaminants into groundbreaking discoveries — including novel lipids, potent inhibitors, and kinases involved in cancer.
Karen Hopkin.
- 51 Scientist to Watch.
Anne-Claude Gingras.
Jef Akst.
- 52 The Literature
Blood flow and the formation of atherosclerotic plaques; virus escape from membrane vacuoles; body temperature and circadian rhythm; how cells escape death after a temporary setback.
- 56 Lab Tools
Freeze- Frame.
Tricks for probing a cell's moving parts.
Kelly Rae Chi.
- 60 Bio Business
Alternative Agriculture.
The debate over genetically engineered crops rages on, but other technologies offer new hope for sustainable farming.
Vanessa Schipani.
- 66 Careers
Rewards of Risk.
Secrets to scoring big money grants for innovative, out-of-the-box research.
Megan Scudellari.
- 76 Reading Frames.
The Evolution of Credibility.
The winding path that an interesting result takes to become a bona fide discovery in this new book on the practice of science.
Frederick Grinnell.
